

Bucket 1: STOPPED but won't restart

Bucket 2: STOPPED will restart and renew

Bucket 3: STARTED new things and will continue

Bucket 4: STARTED but will not continue

Bucket 5: NEW IDEAS to consider

Bucket 1: Things we had to stop doing because of COVID and the more we think about them we are actually not going to restart them. They may have had their day. They may be demanding too much. They may not be the best use of time and energy.

Bucket 2: Activities and programs which we had to stop and as we have processed the time without them we realise just how valuable and important they are. Not only will these be restarted but they will be renewed.

Bucket 3: New things we have had to do during COVID which we will actually keep doing because they are adaptive and valuable. We have learnt about their value and while we may modify them, they are here to stay.

Bucket 4: COVID practices which we will be more than happy to say goodbye to. We needed to do these but they only make sense in the context of COVID and we will happily lay them down.

Bucket 5: Because of needing to stop some things and start others, and now stop the new and think through restarting the old, there may be some 'out of the box' ideas that strike us as worth thinking about in this time of re-calibration and re-starting. Bucket 5 is for bright new ideas that the whole experience has triggered.
